A BUMBLEBEE STORY.-Mississippi rejoices in the possession of the rude talent, that distinguished a backwoods preacher known as 'Uncle Bob.' On one occasion Uncle Bob went to minister to the spiritual wants of some brethren who convened semi-occasionally at a little out of the way church known by the very classic name of Coon Tail.' Inspired by a crowded house, Uncle Bob turned himself loose in his travic style. He beat and stamped, vociferating terribly. For some time previous the pulpit had been unoccupied. Invited by the apparent security and quiet of the place, a community of bumblebees had built a nest beneath. Uncle Bob's mode of conducting the services had disturbed the insects; and half way, and popped his sting into the end of Uncle Bob's nose. He stopped short, gave sundry vigorous but ineffectual slaps, Mr. SAMUEL ARMSTRONG, of Poplar Plains, when he heard a suppressed titter from some wasset on fire, Friday afternoon, by a servant merry youths in a far corner of the house. Turning toward them, with ill concealed rage, he exclaimed, 'no laughing in the house The Confederates, on Thursday last, of God. I allow no laughing in my meetcaptured 60 of the Federals, within fifteen ings. I'll thrash the first man that laughs as soon as service is over.' This threat checked the incipient merriment. Uncle OFIt is rumored that the Confederates Bob regained his composure, forgot the bees, were buying and building numerous Steam. and soon warmed up at a forty-two lick.

But again in the midst of the impassioned gesticulation, a bee stung him full in the forehead. He bowed, dodged and beat the air frantically, until a roar of loughter arose from the congregation. Uncle Bob looked MAN & LANDGRAF, was entered on Monday at them a moment with mingled feelings of night, by thieves and goods taken to the rage and disgust, and then he shouted, 'Meeting's dismissed! Go home-just go home, every one of you! But, as for me," (taking off his coat) 'I don't leave this place ed on the same night, but finding nothing as long as there's a bumblebee about the MAN'S REAL WANTS ARE FEW .- Bodily health and tranquility of mind are more to be desired than all the riches, pomp and glory of a Creesus, a Solomon or an Alexjured by variety of delicacies, weakened by unusual things, and strengthened by the use of proper and accustomed fare.
